National Day for Truth and Reconciliation

September 30, 2023

We would like to encourage everyone to wear orange to honour the Survivors of residential schools and those who never returned home.

The day has been created to give everyone an opportunity to recognize and commemorate the legacy of residential schools, which more than 150,000 First Nations, Metis and Inuit children were forced to attend between the 1870s and 1997.

Since 2013, September 30 has been known as Orange Shirt Day, a day to recognize the tragic history and long-standing effects of residential schools.

Reconciliation is an ongoing journey it involves growing, commitment to learning and doing better.

HONOURING EXPERIENCES. CELEBRATING RESILIENCE.

National Day For Truth & Reconciliation

The federal government chose September 30th as the date for this annual day to acknowledge the lasting, ongoing impact of the residential schools because it is the time of year when government officials would come to Indigenous communities, forcibly remove Indigenous children from their families and send them to residential schools.

This is an annual day to recognize and raise awareness about the residential school system in Canada, join in the spirit of reconciliation, and honour the experiences of Indigenous Peoples. Between the late 1800s and 1996, more than 150,000 First Nations, Métis and Inuit children attended Indian residential schools.

This date has additional significance because for the past 10 years, we have recognized that day as Orange Shirt Day. On Orange Shirt Day, we honour survivors and reflect on the devastating damage residential schools caused to many Indigenous children's self-esteem, well-being, and identity by severing their connection to their land, their culture, and their families.

On September 30, 2023, there are many ways to support survivors and their descendants and relatives – the intergenerational survivors: their grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

The Government of Canada is urging all Canadians to spend the day reflecting on Canada's true history, learning more about Reconciliation and participating in Indigenous-led community events such as marching in solidarity with survivors (Government of Canada 2021).

GRANDPARENT'S

DAY

Mark your calendar as Grandparents Day is coming up soon! This day is in place to celebrate the connections we share with the older generations. It is a time to celebrate and to serve where we honor all grandparents and grand-friends for their contributions to our families and communities."

Ideas for Celebrating Grandparents Day

- Send a handwritten card. ... •Homemade gifts from the heart have your children give their grandparents a homemade gift or drawing. ... •Visit in person - go see your grandparents ...
- Make a phone call ...•Hold a family photo shoot ...•Write a special poem ...
- Organize a family movie date ...

September 11, 2023

This Grandparents Day, we ask you to reach out and spend some quality time - as they all contribute a wealth of knowledge, strength, and guidance to making our world a better place.
